Psychology Internship

Psychology Internships provide real-world experience to the psychology students looking to explore or gain the relevant knowledge and skills required to enter into a particular career field. Internships are relatively short-term in nature with the primary focus on getting some on the job training and taking what's learned in the classroom and applying it to the real world.

Psychology Internship

- Psychology Internship provide exposure to experts in the field, as well as up-close interaction with patients. It will help to students to understand and react to the real time scenarios that student will encounter as a practicing psychologist.
- Most internship is offered in the fields of clinical psychology, Counseling Psychology and organizational psychology, as these are areas where the demand for psychologists is constantly on the rise.

Difference between internship and training

- First difference between two is their duration. Training is provided to the permanent employees of the company either they are existing employees or new employees. After completing the internship term, students are not bound to work for the company. While in case of training, students remain the permanent employee of the company.

TYPES OF INTERNSHIPS

- Paid Internships: It exist primarily in the private sector or in large organizations that have the money to pay students to learn while they work.
- Nonprofit Internships: Doing an internship for a nonprofit organization is usually quite different than working in an organization for profit. Since the purpose of these organizations is not to make money, instead they focus more on providing a service.
- Summer internships: It is usually eight to twelve weeks long and can be full or part-time. More students do internships during the summer than during any other time of the year. These short-term experiences provide a real insight into what it's actually like working in a particular job or career field. There's sufficient time to get into a regular work routine and gain valuable knowledge and skills.

Provider of Psychology Internship

- Depending upon their area of specialization, students will be placed in different hospitals, rehabilitation centers, and reputed NGOs and industries related with psychology. During the internship period students will work in the particular organization during the usual work hour of the same organization.
- students will also assist the respective organization in different forms as desired by the authority of the organization like collection of information for case study, diagnosis of the problem with the help of psychological study tools, designing training program, developing educational materials and so on.

Psychology Internship

- Student can improve his/her competitive advantage as a future job applicant by learning and mastering related skills during his/her internship period.
- Student can put these new items in his/her resume and put himself/herself above other candidates during his/her next job interview.
- No where can student get better experience than working and learning alongside a professional, practicing psychologist.
